

The Nasdaq is in a regressive trend that, by all accounts, should find firm support at 2000 in the event of a long summer drift. 2170 should be tested in the near term with upside restraint at 2450. The Nasdaq is the clear choice for returns after the election year as the Dow is likely to see a lot of air come out from money rotation out of oil and industrial stocks and into the nearly decade long beating taken by tech stocks.

Volume+ Close Up Close Down SMA (50)

©BigCharts.com

MACD (12, 26) MACD EMA (9) Divergence

Relative Strength Index (14)

